DECREES

Art. 1- Research Project

A call is open for a selection procedure on the basis of candidates' qualifications, possibly integrated by an interview, for the assignment of one "Young Researcher" research grant of the duration of two years, renewable for one more year, entitled: “Gaia selection function: development and application”.

The Scientific Responsible of the activity program of the research grant will be Dr. Ronald Drimmel.

This Young Researcher position is part of the project GaiaUnlimited, which is funded from the European Union Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme, under grant agreement No 101004110. The aim of the project is to research, develop, and implement the Gaia survey selection function, as well selection functions of Gaia combined with other surveys. This will result in publicly available data products and open source code to apply the selection functions to analyses of the Gaia data. The successful candidate will contribute to the project by helping in the development and implementation of selection functions applicable to specific subsets of the Gaia catalogue of particular interest for mapping the non-axisymmetric structure of the Milky Way, which may include the subsample of Gaia sources with radial velocities, Cepheid variables and young stellar populations. The candidate will apply the relevant selection functions toward mapping the spiral arms of the Milky Way in both configuration and velocity space. Also of interest is an empirical validation of the top-level selection functions using relevant external surveys.

The Research Grant, aimed at the specified project, is not thought to satisfy the needs for staff personnel of the Institute, but offers the opportunity of carrying out research activities in the framework of the project to candidates who believe that it can be important for their professional growth. It is specified that the present selection procedure is simultaneously aimed at:

- offering an opportunity of professional growth to young people who hold the requirements for the present selection, who want to experience the national and international circuit of research, in a perspective of rotation and mobility, that is acquire specific expertise in the context of temporary projects and/or activities;

The Selection Committee can establish a short list of the eligible applicants to be interviewed, on the basis of qualifications and documented experience in scientific or technological activities concerning the specific subject of the research fellowship. All the activities of the selection procedure (e.g. meetings of the Selection Board, interviews...) can be carried out by using videoconference systems.
